What is an Aptitude Test?

Aptitude refers to an individual's ability to learn or perform certain skills. Aptitude tests are administered by employers to screen candidates for employment. It is a test designed to measure a person's potential ability to perform an activity of a specialized kind. Aptitude tests refer to standardized tests designed to measure an individual's ability to develop certain skills. Studies have applied tests of psychomotor ability, cognitive knowledge, and personality and attempted to relate them to measures of surgical skill.

Aptitude Tests belong to the group of Cognitive Tests. They are designed to give an idea of your future performance in a given area. This Test is used by a variety of employers, in military, police, government organizations & international companies and is a general test of problem solving ability that many consider to be the best measure of intelligence. Aptitude Test is used to describe the level at which an individual learns, understands instructions and solve problems.
